THE BRAIN AND THE MEMORY. Assumed That Every Thought Is a Separate Lodger in the Brain.

What is the brain like in its capacity of storehouse, and what should we see if we could reduce our stature to infinitesimal proportions and travel along the corridors of the brain? Does it contain galleries of pictures? Is it furnished with shelves and pigeon-holes for the classification and care of records and messages? It is impossible to conseive what kind of apparatus or fittings can at once be suitable for storing up pictures and sounds and all the varieties of impressions received from all the senses. Nor can we discover any curious machinery, even with the mi croscope, for the structure of the gray matter is so minute as to defy the powers of the lens, and all that we can detect is an agglomeration of minute

A calculation has been made regarding the number of these brain cells. It is assumed that every thought or perception is a separate lodger in the mind, requiring an apartment of the brain to itself; and the cells are the Adam's Exp... apartments. We have to provide acbe daily papers, for all that our school-masters crammed into us, and all that twe have tearned since. How is this possible in one small skull? Our conception is assisted by photography, which can print the Lord's prayer so small that it requires a powerful microscope to read it. Surely, then, mineroscope to read it. If it were spread out that it BUTTER, EGGS and POULTRY would be found equal to a layer one inch in thickness and twelve inches long by eleven inches broad -or slightly more-giving a total of 134 cubic inches. If all the cells were one-three hundredth of an inch in diameter there would be room for 27,000,000 of them in one cubic inch, and therefore for 3,618,000,000 in the whole; but since many of the cells are smaller, the total number must be greater. Let us, however, be content with the 3,618 million. What is a million? The Rible Old and New Testament together, is said to contain about 2.250,000 of letters; we should therefore, have to pile up 1,113 copies of the Scriptures to get a heap containing as many letters as the brain contains cells.
